It's not uncommon for a band to have a member playing lead guitar, but the Pistol River Concert Association's guest in January has something a little different – a lead cello! Rebecca Roudman is the band member with that title, as she brings her high energy group Dirty Cello to the Friendship Hall on January 14, 2017, the first PRCA show of the new year!

The groups' web page describes their sound as cello like you've never heard before, and Dirty Cello is indeed that in a great and fun way. Roudman is clearly exceptional on the instrument, it's just that the tunes she likes to play move beyond the Bach or Beethoven we might expect from the cello into the realms of bluegrass, blues and rock. Those fast bluegrass fiddle riffs we love to see? Just as fast, but with a much deeper tone with Dirty Cello. Expressive blues guitar bends of the string and your soul? Bent just as expressively and effectively on an upright neck of a cello. Rockin' guitar solos with fingers moving too fast to see on the frets and with the pick? Fingering blazing just as quick, but the bow is taking the lead with Roudman.

Dirty Cello has an incredibly versatile playlist that they like to adapt to the audience. So if bluegrass or blues doesn't seem to be what the listeners are into, they may switch it up to Dolly Parton's Jolene, Jimi Hendrix' Purple Haze, crank out a great version of Proud Mary, or maybe even try some gypsy music to get any belly dancers in the crowd up and moving. Regardless of where the playlist goes, you can bet Rebecca will be smiling and very active on stage.

Dirty Cello has produced four albums, and has toured extensively in the US, Europe and made several stops in China.

Come join us on January 14, 2017 for the first concert of the year at the Friendship Hall, a lively night with Dirty Cello. Bluegrass, blues, rock and maybe some surprises, but it will all come with a smile and plenty of energy from the bands lead cello player. The show starts at 8 PM, and we hope to see you there!
