THE TALBOTT BROTHERS

Happy New Year! Well, almost anyways. These days around The Holidays are always so wonderfully hectic, either traveling ourselves or cleaning, shopping, and cooking for family and friends coming in. And then cleaning up the aftermath. Whew! Luckily, we've just what you need on January 11th to calm those frayed holiday nerves - the beautiful harmonies of the folk/rock duo The Talbott Brothers on the stage at the Pistol River Friendship Hall.

Nick and Tyler Talbott grew up in southwest Nebraska. When they were young, they found and dusted off their Dad's old guitar, then learned to play by taking turns plucking along to Johnny Cash, Beatles records. Soon they were writing their own songs and playing in local coffee shops. In 2012 they decided to transplant to Portland and seriously pursue their music dream.

Both are wonderful musicians, with a preference for guitar (Tyler is the lefty) They also share extraordinary song-writing and vocalists chops. The familiarity of being raised together has helped lead to collaborative story-telling and scores that they blend seamlessly. That family closeness also brings out what they dub "blood-harmonies," a rich addition to their vocals that has led to comparisons with The Everly Brothers.

Their vocals carry a hint of a twang from their rural roots, but there is also a Mumford and Sons quality – not surprising given that the Talbotts list them as a musical influence. Their songwriting is deep and from the heart, delving into issues of day-to-day living we can all relate to.

Like several performers to grace our stage, The Talbott Brothers appear to be on their way up as they pass through Pistol River. Besides several CDs and hundreds of performances across the continent under their belts, they have recently received national written recognition. The August edition of RollingStone labeled the song "Run No More" as one of the "10 Best Country and Americana Songs to Hear Now." And Billboard gave rave reviews to the group's song and video "Without a Doubt" in October.

So get the last of Holiday decorations put away and the house cleaned up, then come join us at the Friendship Hall on January 11th for a great night of folksy-rock music provided by The Talbott Brothers. What a great way to start the New Year!
